Things I Couldn't Live Without

I have many interests in my life. I like playing handball. I play the piano and the guitar. I like spending time with my friends. That is why I play handball in the local handball club and learn playing the piano in the music school. I have friends everywhere to spend time with.

A lot of children my age spend much time playing video games, chatting on social networks and surfing the internet. I am not fond of such things. I could live without my mobile phone or computer. I don't have much time to watch television. But I love watching Disney cartoons with my brother. We watch them and later we play and sing different songs from these cartoons. I think I couldn't live without that.

I like summer holidays. They are my favourite part of the year. I spend them in a small Dalmatian village Vinišće with my family. I go there on the beach, explore hidden parts of the bay or go hiking. I love spending time there and I couldn't live without it. So now, at the end of the school year I can hardly wait to go there and spend the best summer of my life. Once more.

Things I Couldn't Live Without

There are lots of things around us. Some of them we need and some of them we don't need so much. What would you do if I told you: go to your room and point at 10 things like pictures of your family, memories of some place or some person, or stuff that were given to you, that you could throw in the dumpster. Could you do it?

I for example, couldn't. And that's just fine. Many people couldn't. But, what are the things we couldn't really live without? The first thing I couldn't live without is my phone. I don't think I would bear that. What should I text my friends when I'm not at home, if not my phone? Other than that, it would be so embarrassing! Everybody has a phone nowadays and not having a phone, especially in puberty, is just weird.

Also, I couldn't live without my friends. I talk to them all the time and I tell them my secrets. They know my flaws and they still love me. They cheer me up when I'm sad and I do the same to them. If I didn't have friends I would be very sad and lonely.

Next thing I couldn't live without is not a thing. It's a room. My room. I go to my room when I need privacy, silence or when I want to rest. In my room there are things that are important to me and things I couldn't give up. When I was younger, my room was full of Barbie dolls, teddy bears and toys and now they aren't there anymore. They were replaced by some other things.

If you ask some other people what are the things they couldn't live without, they will probably say something different. Because they are different. Because they are different. And now, when you know that my favourite thing is my phone, you might judge me, but I'm just a girl in 8th grade and that's normal, isn't it?
